HISTORICAL BACKGROUND OF THE PATRICK FAMILY

Origin of the Name Patrick

Patrick and Michael are common Irish names, used as first names. The general assumption in the popular mind is that the name Patrick is associated with Saint Patrick, the apostle and patron saint of Ireland. However, it can safely be maintained that the name Patrick as a surname has nothing to do with Saint Patrick. Saint Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, was born in 372, A. D. His real name was Sucat (or Succat, as given by some) and he adopted a Latin name, Patricius, which is now referred to as Saint Patrick. His fame in Ireland no doubt led to the frequent use among the Irish people of the name Patrick as a first name. But it should be understood that Saint Patrick had no connection with the surname Patrick.

All names in Ireland were native until the coming of Christianity, when ecclesiastics introduced Hebrew, Greek, and Latin appellatives. From the best research that can be done on the subject, the names Patrick and Michael were not used by Irishmen until after the Norman Conquest in 1066, A. D. The name Patrick seems to have come into use as a Norse influence after the year 1066, while the name Patric seems to have been an old English name. The Irish name seems to have been Patrykke, while Patrick is generally thought of as Norse in origin. In some instances Partridge is referred to as a variant of Patrick.

Some authorities claim that the name of Patrick is believed to have been originally used as a baptismal name and was later adopted by the sons of the one so named as their patronymic. It is found on ancient Irish, Scotch, and North-English records in the various spellings of Patryk, Patrycke, Patryck, Pateric, Paterik, Paterick, Patric, Patrik, Patricke, Petricke, Petrick, Patrick, and numerous others. The name Patrick is the most generally used in America today.

Among the earliest records of the family in Great Britain are those of William Patric of Lincolnshire in 1273; those of Ivo Patryk of County Essex about the same time; those of Ralph Paterik of Hertfordshire about 1292; those of Patric de Culwen of Westmoreland and Cumberland Counties in 1307; those of Willelmus Patrik of Howden-shire about 1379; those of John Paterik of Yorkshire about the same time; and those of John Patrick of Ayrshire before 1459. These early bearers of the name appear to have been largely of the British landed gentry and yeomanry.

The Scotch Family of Patrick

It is probable that the noted Ayrshire, Scotland, family of the name traces its descent from John Patrick last mentioned in the paragraph above, although this is not certain. This family was represented in 1549 by William Patrick, who was the father of a son named John, who was the father of Hew or Hugh, Robert, James, John, and Alexander. Of these, Hew (or Hugh) was the father by his wife, Janet Crawford, of James, Robert, and Hew (or Hugh), of whom the second was the father in the early seventeenth century of Hew (or Hugh), Robert, and John; Robert probably left no issue; James married Agnes Finlay and was the father of Thomas, Hew (or Hugh), John, James, Robert, and William, all of whom assumed the name of Kilpatrick, or Killpatrick, the eldest son, Thomas, being the father of a son named John and probably of others as well; John married Agnes Dockson and was the father by her of James and Robert, both of whom left numerous issue in Scotland; and Alexander resided in County Antrim, Ireland, and probably left numerous issue there by his wife Joanna Greg.

Burke's Encyclopedia of Heraldry, London, 1844, gives a brief statement about the Scotch line of Patricks, as follows:

The ancestors of the different families of the name of Patrick who now hold property in the County of Ayr (Ayrshire, Scotland) were settled and held about the Monastery of Kilwinning, long before the Reformation. From John Patrick of Overmains near Kilwinning, living in 1605, lineally descended John Patrick from whom his Tutors purchased in 1748 the lands of Tearne in his native county. He was father of Robert Patrick of Tearne and Hazlehead, in Ayrshire, Esq.

Burke's Landed Gentry of Great Britain and Ireland, 1852 (vol. 3, p. 1009) has this to say about the Patricks in Scotland:

The ancestors of the different families of Patrick which now hold property in Ayrshire (says Robertson) were settled, and hold situations about Kilwinning, long prior to the Reformation. John Patrick attests as a notary public a charter connected with the church, dated 19 July 1459, afterwards ratified in Parliament; and William Patrick is a subscribing witness to a lock of the teinds of Dalry, granted by Alexander a commendator of Kilwinning to John Hamilton, 1459.

The Patricks becoming early converts to the Protestant religion joined the reformers under the Earl of Glencairn, and some of them accompanied the expedition to the north of Ireland under Hugh Montmorency of Broadstone, afterwards Viscount of Ardes, who as expressed in his patent from James VI, brought a colony of Scots into Clandebara and Ardes, toward the increase of the restored religion, settled in that country where their descendants still possess property near Serry.

John Patrick (son of William Patrick) who obtained a grant of the lands of Overmains, near Kilwinning, from the monastery, acquired by charter, in 1605, the estate of Byres, in Ayrshire and subsequently part of the lands of Dalgarnven. He died in 1638 leaving five sons, James, Robert, Hew, John, Alexander.

This line has been traced to about 1800, only one of the line coming to America, John Patrick, a merchant in New York.

The Ralston-Patrick Family of Scotland

Burke's Landed Gentry, published at London, England, 1939 edition, brings up to date the Patrick family in Scotland. It gives the following account:

The Patricks of the English Nobility

Henry S. King and Company's book, The Norman People, published at London, England, 1874, (p. 354) has this to say of the Patrick family in the English nobility.

The great Norman house, Patry, or Patrick, or Patrick de la Lande was from La Lande, near Caen.

William Patrick de la Lande is mentioned by Wace as the entertainer of Harold during his visit to Normandy, and as challenging him to combat at Hastings (1066) for breach of his oath. (Wiffen Mem. Russell, i, 73). In England, he held from King William a barony of fifteen fees in Norfolk and Suffolk. William, his son, witnessed a charter of William I. to Savigny Abbey, and had Ralph de Fulgeres and the sons of Henry II in their rev's (sic). Eguerrand, his son, lost his barony which was given to William de Say.

Branches were seated in north of England. Paganus de la Lande held fees in 1165 from the see of York. Robert Patric of this line acquired half the barony of Malpas, Cheshire by marriage in the twelfth century. Richard Patric was of Lincoln t. (sic) Henry III, Richard Lande in 1433, Thomas Patrick to Henry VIII, Simon to Elizabeth are mentioned.

The latter who possessed a considerable estate near Caistor, Lincoln, was grandfather of the learned Simon Patrick, bishop of Ely. The Patrics bore: vaire, arg. and sa., a chief sa. The bishop's line added three pales. (Norman Peoples, Henry S. King & Co., London, 1874)

In the thirteenth century, English history records, one of the Patrick barons led a revolt against the King of Scotland. Backed by the King of England, the revolted took possession of the Scottish King and his wife Elizabeth, and placed them in jail. Later, a regency was appointed for the Scottish King and one of the Patrick barons was appointed to the regency.

The Patricks of Ireland

Arthur Charles Fox-Davis in his book, Armorial Families, published at London, England (6th edition, 1910) gives a brief account of a distinguished group of Patricks now living in County Antrim, Ireland. The following is a quotation from this publication:

John Patrick, Esquire, J. P. for County Antrim, late Captain, 4th Battalion, Royal Irish Rifles, born October 31, 1871, (being the only son of John Patrick, Esq., J. P., by his wife Augusta Mary, youngest daughter of John Davison of Raceview, Boughamshire, Antrim.) Married June 15, 1897, Anne Florence, third daughter of Joseph Clark, Rutherford, Esq., J. P., County Westmoreland, and late R. M., County Antrim; and has issue,

John Patrick, gentleman, b. June 10, 1898; and Florence Amy.

Estates: Dunminning, Cokey (Middle), Eagry, Capecastle, all in County Antrim (Ireland). (Armorial Families, Arthur Charles Fox-Davis, London, England, 1910, 6th edition, p. 1252.)

Armorial bearings. Argent, a saltire, engrailed sable, between in chief a thurst and in base a trefoil slipped, both proper, on a chief of the second three roses of the field; upon the escutcheon is placed a helmet befitting his degree with a mantling sable and argent and for his crest upon a wreath of the colours, a dexter hand erect propre, with motto: Ora et labore. (Same reference)

There is also a group of Patricks at Durham City, in Ireland. This branch has a different coat of arms and is described in Burke's Cyclopaedia of Heraldry, London, 1844, as follows:

Partick, Durham City. Gu. a lion ramp. ar. within a bordure of the last, charged with eight cinquefoils of the first. Crest. An arm in armour embowed issuing out of a wreath.

The Patricks in Colonial America

Although it is not entirely clear in every case from which of the many branches of the family in the British Isles all of the early emigrants of the name to America were descended, it is generally believed that most of the Patricks derive from a common ancestor of a remote period.

Among the first emigrants of the name to America were the following: Daniel Patrick, who came to America in 1630 and settled at Watertown, Massachusetts, whence he later removed to Cambridge, in the same colony; Henry Patrick, who came to James City County, Va., about 1636; William Patrick, who settled in James City County, Va., about 1637 and may possibly have been a brother of the last-mentioned immigrant; John Patrick, who came to Virginia in 1638; Thomas Patrick, who settled in the Isle of Wight County, Va., about 1643; William Patrick, who made his home at Hartford, Connecticut, before 1645 and was the father in that year of a son named Samuel; Leonard and Seath (?) Patrick, who were probably living in Charles River County, Va., as early as 1646; John Patrick of Northumberland County, Va., in 1651; and Christopher Patrick, who came from Westmoreland County, England, to America in 1699 and settled in New England.

John Camden Hatten in his book entitled The Original Lists of Persons of Quality (1600 - 1700) published by G. A. Baker and Company, Inc., New York, 1931, on page 136 gives the following account of the arrival of one Thos. Patrick. On October 24, 1635, the ship Constance left London, England, bound for Virginia, and her record shows:

24 Octobris, 1635. Aboard the Constance, Clement Campion, MF, bound to Virginia: Thomas Patrick, age. 22. (Listed in MSS, Public Record Office, London, England, as Thos. Patrick.

The register book contained this: Register of all ye Passinger wch Passed from ye Port of London for an whole yeare Endinge at Xpmas, 1635:

Tho: Patrick 22
24 Octobris, 1635

bound to Virginia from Port of London.

George Cabell Greer, Clerk of the Virginia Land Office, Richmond, Virginia (W. C. Hill Printing Company) published in 1912, contains a list of early arrivals of Patricks in Virginia, with the names of persons in charge of the ships on which they came. The list is as follows:

William Patrick, 1637, by Henry Hart, James Citie Co.
Henry Patrick, 1636, by Edward Minter, _____ Co.
Hen Patrick, 1638, by Edward Minter, James Citie Co.
John Patrick, 1638, by William Banister, _____ Co.
Isabel Patrick, 1653, by Capt. Rat. Abrall, _____ Co.
Leo Patrick, 1646, by Sir William Berkeley, _____ Co.
John Patrick, 1651, by Humphrey Tabb, Northumberland Co.

(Early Virginia Immigrants, George Cabell Greer, Richmond-Virginia, 1912, pp. 251-252.)

In the Minutes of the Council, Colonial Virginia, on 27 March 1672, a certificate was granted to John Wallop to enter "19 rights". The names included Edmond Patrick.

A Branch of the Kilpatrick Family

The Media Research Bureau, Washington, D. C., which has done some study on the Patrick Family, states that:

One branch of the Patrick family in America is believed to have been descended from the Kilpatrick or Killpatrick family of Scotland. Of this line, Thomas Kilpatrick, whose descendants in this country assumed the original form of the name, emigrated in 1718 to Boston, whence he soon removed to York County, Maine. He finally settled in the town of Biddeford, Maine, where he died in 1763 at the age of eighty-eight years. He left (it is said) nine sons, one of whom was named Andrew. Andrew removed to New Hampshire, where he was the father of Samuel, William, John, Robert, and Jacob.

The Irish Branch of Patricks in America

Sometime before the year 1720 Robert Patrick came from Ireland to Rutland, Massachusetts. He had issue there by his wife Margaret of five children, Dinai, Elizabeth, Margaret, Mary, and Robert.

About 1724 Matthew Patrick came from Ireland to America and settled at Warren, Massachusetts. By his wife Mary he is believed to have been the father of John, Thomas, Isaac, and Matthew. Of these, John married Rebecca Wiley and was the father by her of Sarah, Matthew, Isaac, the Reverend Joseph, and John.

John Patrick emigrated from Ireland to Worcester, Massachusetts, before 1733, but his records are not complete. It is possible that he was the father of the Robert Patrick who made his home at Lebanon, Connecticut, in the latter seventeenth century and left issue there of a son named William and possibly of others, but this theory is purely conjectural.

In 1744 Robert Patrick came from County Tyrone, Ireland, to America and settled first in Pennsylvania, whence he removed about three years later to Augusta County, Virginia. By his wife Rachel Campbell, whom he married in Pennsylvania, he was the father of several sons, one of whom is said to have been the father of the Revolutionary hero, Major William Patrick.

John Patrick of Augusta County, Virginia, in 1765, who was probably a son of the above-mentioned immigrant Robert, although the connection has not been definitely established, was the father of a son named Charles. This Charles died in 1797, leaving six children, John, Charles, Mary, Rachel, Martha, and Margaret.

More recent representatives of these and probably of other emigrants of the name to America have spread to all parts of the country and have aided greatly in the founding and development of the nation. Notable on the whole for strength of body, mind, and personality, the Patricks have been leaders in many fields of endeavor.

The Patricks and the American Revolution

In the French and Indian War (1754-1763) Hugh Patrick of York County, Pennsylvania, is listed as a Captain. (See Pennsylvania Archives, Vol. 31, 1st series, p. 21.

The Media Research Bureau, Washington, D. C., is authority for the following statement regarding the record of the Patricks in the American Revolution:

Among the Patricks who fought in the War of the Revolution were Major William Patrick of Virginia; Lieutenant John Patrick of Massachusetts; Captain William Patrick of Massachusetts; and numerous others in the ranks of the various New England and Southern States.

In the Compendium of American Genealogy, Volume 4, published by the Virus Company, Chicago, Illinois, 1930 (p. 445) is found this statement:

John Patrick (1751-1782) of Maryland; removed to Lincoln County, North Carolina; commissioner of labor during American Revolution. Married 1772 Mary Patrick (b. 1753)

In William and Mary Quarterly, volume 8, 1928, p. 121, is recorded the fact that John F. Patrick of Campbell County, Virginia, was clerk of the court of Campbell County. On page 123 of the same publication John F. Patrick is named in the records of the Court of Campbell County, Virginia as a citizen who from March 7, 1782 to April 14, 1783, furnished supplies to the continental army. He is listed there as one of the citizens who asked the court for pay for this service.

The Patricks in the United States Census of 1790

A search of the United States Census for 1790 (the first census taken by the United States Government) reveals that the Patricks were widely scattered in America by that time. A list of these, completely compiled, would be interesting. In preparing this report, time was not available to make a search of the census records of all the states, but the list given below will be interesting. Only the names of the heads of families were listed in this census, so that it is not possible to get very much of a picture therefrom, except for heads of families. The list is valuable, no doubt, for persons interested in tracing origins of early settlers. The following is the list: (See census records, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.)

Patricks in Kentucky, 1790 Census

Lydia Patrick, Nelson County
 Pengrais Patrick, Bourbon County
 Thomas Patrick, Fayette County

In 1790, Kentucky was not a State of the Union. It was not admitted as a state until 1792. There is, however, a record of the census for Kentucky on file in the Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., and the three names given above are therein listed. At that time Kentucky had the following named counties: Mason, Bourbon, Woodford, Fayette, Madison, Mercer, Lincoln, Jefferson, and Nelson. Bourbon and Mason Counties occupied then what is now all of Eastern Kentucky and part of Central Kentucky, so that it is not possible to tell much about the particular sections in which these persons lived. A study of the census for later years would be more fruitful, but for the purposes of this paper, there was not time available to go into them.

Patrick County, Virginia

On November 26, 1790, the Virginia Legislature passed an act establishing Patrick County, Virginia. Henry County was divided into two parts at that time and one part called Henry County. The town of Taylorsville was established as the county seat of that by an act of the Legislature of Virginia, on November 17, 1792. This county is not the home of the Patrick family, and the county must have been named for Virginia's favorite son, Patrick Henry, and not for any family of Patricks. (Hening, Statutes at Large of Virginia, vol. 13, p. 160 and vol. 13, p. 582)

Marriage Records of the Patricks, old and new

A study of marriage records of a family often furnishes a cue to ancestral lines. Such records are invaluable to the student of genealogy. State historical societies are always interested in uncovering sources of this kind. Marriage records in cities, counties, when preserved are of great value to students of genealogy. A few scattering records have been assembled for use in this paper and these records, with citations, where available, are given below.

Thomas Patrick (Pattricke) is recorded as being married to Susanna Bradbete, spinster of St. Sepulchre, at St. Sepulchre, August 15, 1576. (London Marriage Licenses, Joseph Foster, London England, 1887, p. 1026)

Thomas Patrick (Pattricke) of Swettenham, County Norfolk, gentleman, bachelor, 30, and Mrs. Jane Ashby of St. Mary-at-Hill, London, spinster, 23, were married with consent of her parents at St. Mary-at-Hill aforesaid, September 16, 1693. (Same source.)

William Thomas Patrick (1823-1899) from England; died at Paw Paw, Illinois; married Mary Harper, 1849. (Ibid, p. 245)

Enoch Patrick (1801-1865) of Va., Ky., Ind., and Ill., married Polly Martin, 1821; born in Ireland, reared in Scotland; emigrated to America; educated at Martinsville, Maryland. (Ibid, vol. 5, p. 49)

Governor Spicer Patrick of West Virginia married Virginia Harvie, c. 1850. (Register, Kentucky Historical Society, vol. 25, 1927, p. 279.)

Herod Patrick married Manerva Lancaster, January 8, 1836. Taken from the family Bible of Joseph Lancaster, Bath County, Kentucky. (Register, Kentucky State Historical Society, vol. 26, 1928, p. 171)

Isabelle Patrick married 24 Sept. 1800, Sir Richard de Sutton of Malpas. Isabelle was the daughter of William Patrick of Malpas. (Colonial Families of the United States, George Norbury MacKensie, vol. 5, p. 196)

Marriages of the Patricks in Floyd County, Kentucky

A list of early Floyd County marriages was published in the Register of the Kentucky State Historical Society in 1928 (Vol. 26, 1928, p. 48.) Magoffin County was formed from a part of Floyd County, and the following list of early marriages may be of interest.

Miscellaneous Items about the Patrick Family

The Patricks of Fayette County. There is a distinguished family of Patricks in Fayette County, Kentucky. Mr. C. C. Patrick of Fayette County, now lives in Lexington. So far as the writer knows at present, his family consists of one son, C. C. Patrick, Jr., now living in Fayette County, and Dinsmore Patrick, daughter, who married Mr. William Conant. Mr. Conant lives in the Pisgah section of Fayette County, and is a prominent farmer. Mr. Conant is a member of the distinguished Conant family so prominent in New England.

Charles Patrick is listed as head of a family in Fayette County, Kentucky, in 1810, but it is not known whether he is the ancestor of Mr. C. C. Patrick of Fayette County. It is not known, either, whether there is a connection at all between the present family of Patricks in Fayette County and the other branches of the Patrick family which settled in Nelson County, Bath County, Floyd County, Magoffin County, Johnson County, and other parts of Kentucky.

Lowry Patrick has his will recorded in Mercer County, Kentucky. The will was made in 1781 and probated March, 1796 (Will Book 7-25-1781, Mercer County, Kentucky). The name of his wife is not given but three sons, John, James, and Wilson, and five daughters, Margaret, Hannah, Betty, Mary and Jane (Jane Todd) as well as one child yet unborn, are mentioned. (Register, Ky. Hist. Soc., vol. 28, p. 31) The name of Lowry Patrick, however, does not appear on the tax list of Mercer County, for 1789.

James Patrick is mentioned in the court records of Fayette County in 1776. When "Andrew Crocket ass'ee of James Patrick, this day claimed a settlement and preemption to a tract of land lying on the mouth of Drake Camp Creek, where it empties into Dicks River, by said Patrick's improving the same, raising a crop of corn in the year 1776. This information is taken from the court record in the "Certificate Book" on file in Fayette County, Kentucky. (Register, Ky. Hist. Soc., vol. 31, p. 431.)

Robert Patrick of Nelson County, Kentucky, is recorded as having married Betsey Langley, Nelson County, Kentucky, September 20, 1796, Jos. Chambers performing the marriage ceremony., in Nelson County marriage records. (Ibid, vol. 20)

Ro Patrick and Robert Patrick are mentioned in a volume of war records in the Adjutant General's Office of Kentucky, as having performed military service under the laws of Virginia. It is conjectured that this has reference to the American Revolution. (Register, Ky. Hist. Soc., Vol. 32, p. 10)

Isaac Patrick is mentioned in the office of the Secretary of State records, Frankfort, Kentucky, as being an aid, 30th June, 1810, staff officer, in Div. 2, Brig. 13, Samuel South, Brigadier General. This entry appears on an old manuscript appearing in that office, and it is conjectured that it has reference to the War of 1812. (Register, Ky. Hist. Soc. vol. _____, p. 129)

William Patrick is recorded as being married to Mary Holt, on October 20, 1784, in Norfolk County, Virginia. (William and Mary Quarterly, vol. 8, 1938, p. 169)

Richard Patrick lived in Northampton County, Virginia about 1684. His daughter, Ursula Patrick, is recorded as having married Argrol Warren about 1684 in Northampton County. She had a sister, Elizabeth Patrick. (William and Mary Quarterly, vol. 8, 1938, p. 169)

The Kilpatrick Family. The Kilpatrick and Kirkpatrick families are Scotch, belonging to the Clan of Colquhoun of Scotland. (Scottish Clans, Muson Book Company, Ltd., Toronto, Canada, 1935. It appears that one branch of the Patrick family in America early took the name Kilpatrick or Killpatrick.)

Names of Patricks Listed in Nationally Known Directories

A number of members of the Patrick family have their names listed in various directories published in the United States, such as Who's Who in America, Who's Who in Kentucky, published by the Standard Printing Company, Louisville, Kentucky, 1930; and Leaders in Education: a biographical directory, published by the Science Press, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, 1932. In general, the publication of names and biographies in these publications is done entirely at the solicitation of the editors or publishers, who publish the names entirely gratis, and who make their selections entirely on the basis of the individual's reputation, or upon the recommendation of prominent persons. Who's Who in America is published by the A. N. Marquis Company, Chicago, Illinois, and is usually published biennially. Who's Who in Kentucky has been published only once, namely in 1930; Leaders in Education is published periodically, the first number appearing in 1932, and the second issue to appear in 1940. The following is a brief list of names appearing in these directories:

Other Patricks, present and past of some distinction

Ashland T. Patrick, Prestonsburg, Floyd County, Kentucky. Now (1940) around 80 years of age, but still vigorous. Served with distinction as Circuit Judge; an attorney of distinction. Initiated the Patrick Reunion in 1939, which was most successful, and continues to serve as sponsor for the organization with credit to himself and to his native county (Magoffin.)

Meniffee Patrick of Magoffin County, Kentucky. Former county superintendent of schools of Magoffin County; served with distinction as Judge in his county; a prominent and able attorney of Salyersville, Magoffin County. Now (1940) still vigorous and active as an attorney-at-law.

Sam J. Patrick, Monticello, Kentucky, capitalist and oil producer. Born in Magoffin County, Kentucky; brother of Meniffee Patrick, Thomas Patrick, Asbury Patrick, and others in the same family. At one time served with distinction as a member of the Kentucky Legislature. At this time (1940) he is still "on this side of 50" and active in oil production.

Fred E. Patrick, attorney, Sapulpa, Oklahoma. Son of Frank Patrick, formerly of Magoffin County, Kentucky. Fred's father married a Taulbee (William Taulbee's daughter, Mary, Wolfe County, Kentucky) and this strain of Patricks bears the Taulbee temperament. Fred formerly served in public office, with distinction, as tax commissioner of Creek County, Oklahoma. At this time (1940) he is still active in legal work in Sapulpa, Oklahoma. Creek County, Oklahoma, has for a quarter of a century been the center of a very rich oil field, and Fred E. Patrick has grown up in that community in this oil atmosphere. He has been financial adviser to great oil interests in Oklahoma, and should be remembered in Kentucky. (His father came from White Oak, Kentucky, and his name is to be inserted later. At this writing, the name slips me, but the old gentleman lives in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, and is still hale and hearty.

Olney Patrick, State Department of Education, Frankfort, Kentucky. Olney has been identified with vocational rehabilitation work for the State of Kentucky and has served ably and with distinction in that capacity. He was formerly county superintendent of schools in Magoffin County, and has for a quarter of a century been a leader in the State's educational program. At this writing (1940) Olney is on "the safe side of fifty."

Owing to the fact that I have been away from my native county (Magoffin) for more than thirty years, I am not familiar with the names of some of the rising generation of the distinguished Patrick family of Magoffin County, Kentucky. Many names occur to me at this time -- names which are very dear to me -- but I hesitate to continue naming them. (I fear that the list might get me into trouble, for there are many whom I should mention. I feel disposed, however, to mention the name of Dr. Lenore Patrick of Salyersville, Kentucky; graduate of the University of Kentucky; M. D., Louisville Medical School; has served an internship at Bellevue Hospital, New York City; Hospital for Women, Boston, Massachusetts; Gallagher Hospital, Washington, D. C., and now (1940) she emerges to the practice of medicine. She is the first woman physician ever to go out for medical practice in Magoffin County. We predict that she will be a distinguished physician and serve humanity with honor to herself and her native county, (Magoffin). She is still a young woman around 30 years of age.

Other prominent Patricks, not mentioned above

I find in my notes the names of a number of prominent Patricks, about whom I do not have definite information as to their time or place of birth. Some are living, and some have passed away, but at the risk of being a poor genealogist, I include their names, as follows:

Gail Patrick, Hollywood, California, movie star

James G. Patrick, graduated, 1935, from the University of Southern California.

William Patrick, D. D., Principal, Manitoba College, Winnipeg, Canada. Author of James, the Lord's Brother, published by T. T. Clark, Edinburg, 1900.

Marsena R. Patrick, Brigadier General, U. S. A. Distinguished agriculturist and army officer of the State of New York. Was an army officer in the Civil War, and also in the war of 1845. He resigned as army officer after the close of each war. Was prominent in Virginia at the close of the War Between the States. (It is thought that General Marsena Patrick is a descendant of the Kilpatrick family.) *

D. W. Patrick, Surgeon, U. S. Public Health Service. Specialist in leprosy investigations, and now stationed at Honolulu, Hawaii.

J. N. Patrick, A. M., of St. Louis, Missouri. Published several books as follows: Elements of Pedagogy, St. Louis, Mo., 1894; Lessons in English; Essentials in English. He was a textbook writer and author in education in the late 19th century.

George Zinovei Patrick of California is the author of a book, Popular Poetry in Soviet Russia, published by the University of California Press, 1929.

David Patrick, LL. D., Editor of Chambers Encyclopedia, published at Edinburg and London, 1897.

Simon Patrick (1626-1707) b. at Gainsborough; educated at Queen's City College; bishop of Chichester (1689); bishop of Ely (1691). He was a devout and erudite theologian, and author of a number of books.

* Brigadier General Marsena R. Patrick, U. S. A., b. Nov. 11, 1811; d. July 27, 1898. Soldier and agriculturist. b. near Watertown, Jefferson County, New York; Scotch-Irish and English, Colonial and Revolutionary stock; 18th and youngest child of John Patrick and Miriam White (Patrick). His father's family (originally (Kil Patrick) had dropped the prefix soon after reaching New England, early in the 18th century. In 1859 was elected President of New York State Agricultural College. THE PATRICK COAT OF ARMS

In which is given a brief discussion of heraldry, with a sketch of its history and origin, and containing also a description of variants of the Patrick crests and coats of arms used by some English Patrick families as well as American Patrick families of to-day.

Proud was he of his name and race,
Of old Sir William and Sir Hugh,
And in the parlor, full in view,
His Coat-of-Arms, well framed and glazed,
Upon the wall in color blazed.

The origin of heraldry

The origin of heraldry may be traced back to the dawn of history. Primitive peoples painted or tattooed tribal badges on their bodies; the ancient Hebrews, Egyptians, Chinese, and Japanese used symbols comparable with the insignia of heraldry; the Aztecs of Mexico carried shields and banners bearing personal or tribal devices; and the heroes of ancient Greece and Rome inscribed hereditary ensigns on their shields. Centuries later the Norman invaders of England in 1066 bore shields emblazoned with crudely devised insignia. But all these early devices lack the essential characteristics of true armorial bearings.

The History of Armorial Bearings

True heraldry, in the sense of a systematized science of hereditary armorial bearings, dates from the early twelfth century. There is no record of the use of such bearings during the First Crusade of 1096, and they were extremely rare during the Second Crusade of 1147. But in 1139 a number of the shields borne in the Third Crusade were emblazoned; and the great seal of Richard the Lion-Hearted, as pictured in Scott's Ivanhoe, in the same year shows his shield charged with a lion rampant.

Several factors have contributed to the rise of heraldry. (1) Man's natural desire to enhance his personal appearance, which was expressed in his military equipment; (2) the need among warriors who covered their heads and bodies with armor, for identifying marks easily recognizable in the press of battle; (3) the need, in an age when few could write and personal seals served instead of signatures on official or private papers, for seals of clearly identifiable design. Heraldry was the answer to these requirements of the times, and with remarkable swiftness came into general use. From the beginning of the thirteenth century princes, nobles, knights, and gentry adopted the custom and proudly displayed their arms in architectural and household decorations, in jewelry, and in embroidery, as well as on their war equipment. From the practice of embroidering the family device on the surcoat, worn over the coat of mail, comes the expression coat of arms.

Of what the coat of arms consists

The complete composition of a coat of arms includes the shield of arms, the helmet, the crest, the wreath, the mantling and the motto. The shield, on which is displayed the armorial device, is the most important part of the composition. It represents the old knightly shield and may vary in shape according to the taste of the artist. The helmet, derived like the shield from the defensive armor of the knight, is placed above the shield. It may be used even though the coat of arms includes no crest. The crest, principal accessory of the shield of arms, surmounts the helmet. Like the shield and helmet, it has its origin in the accoutrement of the knight, who wore on his helmet, as a special mark of distinction, an ornament of painted wood, metal, or leather. A wreath of twisted silk, usually of two colors, was commonly worn on the knight's helmet, surrounding the base of the crest. In heraldry the wreath appears between the helmet and the crest as a support for the crest. It is sometimes replaced by a coronet or chapeau. The mantling, originally two pennantlike strips of silk attached to the top of the helmet, has in heraldry taken the form of an intricate, conventionalized scrollwork flowing down on both sides of the shield. It is generally believed that the mantling originated during the Crusades as a protection for the helmet from sun and weather and that the artist's scrollwork represents the shredding of the cloth by enemy swords. The motto, which is inscribed on a scroll placed either above or below the shield, is not an essential part of the composition, is not necessarily hereditary, and may be changed at will. Many of the oldest coats of arms include neither crest nor motto.

Thus the composition of a complete coat of arms includes: (1) the shield; (2) the helmet; (3) the crest; (4) the wreath; (5) the mantling; (6) the motto.

Heraldry in the United States

Heraldry was introduced into America by the first settlers, many of whom, younger sons of the nobility or the gentry, brought with them from England or the Continent their hereditary coats of arms. Evidence of the use of arms by the European-born colonists and the early generations of their descendants is to be found in old paintings, in engraved silverware, in seals affixed to letters and official documents, and in carvings on ancient monuments and tombstones. In colonial America armorial bearings were handed down from generation to generation and the custom was by no means discarded when political ties with England were severed. Regarded as an emblem of family rather than of nationality, arms continued in common use during the Revolution. There are innumerable instances of officials high in American public life of the time -- among them Jay, Schuyler, Livingston, Mifflin, Adams, and Washington -- who used their ancestral arms, seals, and signet rings. Washington displayed his family arms on his carriage, on his bookplate, and on the seal which he affixed to letters and papers; and the Adams arms appear on President John Quincy Adams' bookplate.

In addition to the use of coats of arms by individuals, the federal government has an official coat of arms. Each state has its seal; each college or university of any pretensions has an official seal; each city adopts an official seal. Organizations of all kind have an emblem of some sort. Each state has an official flower. All these are emblematic of loyalty, dignity, and importance of the state or organization. It is in keeping, therefore, that individuals use their family coats of arms as emblematic of their family importance or achievements.

The dictionary of heraldry

Coats of arms of families are described in books on heraldry in heraldic language. Many ancient terms have been perpetuated with a peculiar significance. To understand fully the meaning of the terms used, one needs to resort to books on the subject, or to a good dictionary of heraldry. The following abbreviations (not intended for a complete list) will give some idea of the abbreviations and terms used in heraldry.

Or , gold; color in yellow expressed by dots
Argent . Silver or white; it is left quite plain
Gules . Red	Saltire . St. Andrew's cross
Azure . Blue	Vaire . Small bells ranged in lines.
Vert . Green
Purple . Purple	Pale . Perpendicular lines
Sable . Black	In pile . 3 swords in pile
Sanguine . Dark red
Mullet . Stars
Ambulant . The act of walking
Courant . Running
Dexter . The proper right side of anything.
Proper . Changes in an escutcheon appear in their natural colors.

Abbreviations: Abbreviations are frequently used, such as arg., argent; az., azure; erm., ermine; gu, gules; ppr., proper; purp., purpure; sa, sable.

In the discussion of the coats of arms of various branches of the Patrick family to follow, one may need to refer to a dictionary of heraldry to understand fully the meaning conveyed.

THE NAME AND FAMILY OF PATRICK

PART II, GENEALOGY

Compiled by

Wellington Patrick
Lexington, Kentucky

Containing a lineage of some Eastern Kentucky Patrick families. These lineages are in temporary form, and intended for study and correction. Persons receiving a copy of this document are requested to cooperate with the author in completing the genealogy insofar as possible.

Some of the lines are not clearly connected. Further work and study will no doubt enable us to connect lines not now connected up, and to correct others. When the work is in more complete form it may be published.

THE PATRICK FAMILY IN EASTERN KENTUCKY

Being a brief account of the descendants of Hugh Patrick of Maryland, who settled in Eastern Kentucky, without any attempt to follow out the lines in detail,

And containing also a brief account of the descendants of Hugh Patrick of Johnson's Fork, Magoffin County, Kentucky. (This genealogy is tentative, and subject to correction.)

The Patrick Family in Eastern Kentucky

Mr. Mitchell Hall has written an interesting account of certain families in Johnson County, Kentucky, and in (1) that history he includes a sketch of the Patrick family. A summary of his conclusions is given below. Assuming that all his conclusions are correct, the Patricks of Magoffin County, Johnson County, Floyd County, and nearby counties might all trace their ancestry to Hugh Patrick. Mr. Hall does not give dates when these individuals lived. One who makes any attempt at the study of genealogy knows how difficult it is always to get together exact dates of when individuals lived and died.

My studies of the Patrick family lead me to wonder if some of the Patricks in Eastern Kentucky did not drift into that section around 1800 from Western Virginia. As I have previously shown by studies of the United States census of 1790, the Patricks were widely scattered in this country at that time. In the migrations to this country a good many Irish Patricks headed for New York and the New England coast very early. Patricks came over from London, presumably from Northumberland County, or nearby (though this is largely conjecture) and settled in Eastern Virginia near Jamestown. Previously, I have given a record of Thomas Patrick who embarked from London, England to Virginia in 1635. After Tidewater Virginia was settled by almost pure English stock, migrations of the Scotch and Irish set in. Many Scotch Presbyterians and Scotch-Irish peoples, after the settlement of Tidewater Virginia, found their homes in the Piedmont section of Virginia along the foothills of the Blue Ridge and Allegheny Mountains. It is conceivable, though this is conjecture, that this group contained a Scotch strain of Patricks and also perhaps an Irish strain, and that from these Eastern Kentucky was settled. Some of these settlers, tradition says, were Patricks. In my own family, there is a tradition that one Hen Patrick came from Virginia.

As I have previously contended, certain groups of the Patrick family belonged to the English nobility. English history relates that one of the Patrick barons was a member of a group of revolters in the thirteenth century, who took possession of the person of the Scottish King and his wife Elizabeth and placed them in jail. The group was backed by King James of England. Later Earl Patrick, (Earl of York (?), was designated by King James I (?) as regent for the King of Scotland. It is believed that all groups of the Patricks had a common origin. This statement is made by several writers, though no one has conclusively shown such to be the case. Our contention here is that the present Patrick family in England, Ireland, Scotland, and America sprang from the Norman line of the Patrick nobility which came over with William, the Conqueror to England in 1066 A. D. There is evidence that such a group came over at that time, but as to the common origin being Norman-French stock, it is a matter of considerable conjecture.

(1) Hall, Mitchell. Johnson County, Kentucky; History and Genealogy of its People, published by the Standard Press, Louisville, Kentucky, in two volumes, 1920.

To return to Mr. Hall's account of the descendants of Hugh Patrick of Maryland, he states: (quoted portions Hall's)

Hugh Patrick of Maryland. "The Patrick family traces its ancestry to Hugh Patrick who lived in Maryland."

Jeremiah Patrick. "He had a son, Jeremiah who married Sallie Blair, and moved from Maryland to Giles County, Virginia, about 1790. In 1810, he moved from Giles County to Russell County in the same state, and from there to Floyd County (now Magoffin County), Kentucky. In 1822 he died and was buried on the Middle Fork of Licking River."

William Patrick of Floyd County. Jeremiah had a son William who married Molly Rains and came from Giles County, Virginia to Magoffin County. William and Molly Blake had children: Meredith, Reuben, John, Jeremiah, Jincy, Richard, William, Nancy, and Polly."

Meredith Patrick. "Meredith Patrick married Rebecca Cope. She was born in Magoffin County and was a large land owner, possessing between 2,500 and 3,000 acres of land. He took an active part in local politics and was Magistrate and a man of importance in various fields and prominent as a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. When war broke out between the two sections of the country he gave his sympathies to the North. He and his wife had the following family: Herod, who died at Bloomington, lived to be an old man; Elijah, who served in the State Senate following the close of the war of the sixties . . .; Captain Reuben (see No. 20 of the Hager family); and Serena, who was the wife of Neria Sweatman . . .; Wiley C., of Company 3, 14th Kentucky Infantry, was killed on the battle field in Georgia; and Alexandria who died in Morgan County, where he had resided for years."

Robert Patrick of Magoffin County, Kentucky, and Descendants

Notes on the ancestry of Judge Ashland T. Patrick, son of John Wesley Patrick (lineage 9) The following letter is recorded in the Paintsville Herald, for November 23, 1916. It was written to the Herald by Judge Patrick:

Prestonsburg, Kentucky,
October 26, 1916

I was at my father's home not long ago, and my mother showed me a picture of my great grandmother, Elizabeth Litteral, and I found on it a short history of her and her people, and herewith send same to you for publication, if you please, thinking that it might be of some interest to her posterity who are very numerous in Johnson and Magoffin counties, if perchance they read it. The following is on the back of the photograph, which was retaken from one also in the possession of my mother, Abigail Patrick, nee Salyer, daughter of Jacob and Newcarus Salyer; Newcarus was the daughter of John and Elizabeth Litteral:

"Mrs. Elizabeth Litteral, wife of John Litteral, who fought in the war of 1812. This couple came to Pigeon Creek, Johnson county, Kentucky, from Powell's Valley, Lee County, Virginia, in 1816."

My information is that they came to this country with three children, Newcarus, who married Jacob Salyer, he having emigrated from Virginia about 1820; and located where Marion Litteral (sic) now lives. Horston who married Katie Ramey, and Abigail who married John Fitzpatrick. These three children married in Kentucky. The following were born to John and Elizabeth after they came to Kentucky, viz: Daniel, who married Polly Kanard, and George, who married the widow Adkins ne Mankins.

"Elizabeth Litteral, ne Roland, was born of French Huguenot (French Protestant of the 16th and 17th centuries) ancestry, in Lee county, Virginia, in 1786, and died at Oil Springs, Johnson County, Kentucky in 1878, aged 92 years, and was buried at the Litteral graveyard near Oil Springs, Kentucky. Her mother was the daughter of Col. Horston of Powell's Valley, Lee County, Virginia. He was a very prosperous and influential man. (My information is that he owned over one hundred slaves.) Elizabeth was the sister of the late Peter Rowland, of Lee County, Virginia, and a first cousin of the first Roland Burns, Attorney, who settled near Louisa, Kentucky, in early days."

With best wishes to all who are related to this grand old woman, whose bones are decaying in the tomb beneath the green sod on the beautiful bank of Little Paint.

Your kinsman,

A. T. Patrick

KENTUCKY PATRICKS AND LAND GRANTS

PART III

The Patricks were found in pioneer Kentucky. There is a record of a land grant of 13,000 acres of land to Henry Patrick on Mill Creek in Jefferson County, in 1784. The land occupied by Magoffin and Morgan Counties of to-day was formed from what was once Fayette County. In 1784 there were three counties in the State, Jefferson, Fayette, and Lincoln. The boundary lines at that time were not very clear. There was a Mill Branch in what is now Magoffin County, and there is a Mill Creek in what is now Jefferson County. My inference is, without examining the wording of the land patent, that Henry Patrick did not come to what is now Magoffin County. In 1812, William and Charles Patrick obtained grants of land in Fayette County, one mile from Leestown. The Fayette County Patricks of to-day no doubt trace their ancestry to those two men.

Magoffin County as it is to-day was once part of Floyd County, Morgan County, and Johnson County. The record of land transfers prior to 1860 is recorded not in Magoffin but in the other counties named. I have given in the pages that follow the location of land taken up by members of the Patrick family in Kentucky. These records are valuable in that they give the dates of the transfers, and they also serve as an important aid to the student of genealogy in fixing dates and getting locations of ancestors.

My own grandfather, Arch Patrick, lived on Johnson's Creek in Magoffin County and his land purchases are recorded in the pages that follow. The father of Arch, Hugh Patrick, occupied land on White Oak Creek in Magoffin County, which was then Morgan County. The principal Patricks traced in this discussion are those who center on Johnson Creek, White Oak Creek, Middle Fork of Licking, and Burning Fork of Licking River. The land records on the following pages is interesting and valuable for those interested.

Land Grants To Patricks in Kentucky

In the early settlement of Kentucky, there was a mad rush for land. Literally thousands of rugged people pushed their domestic caravans over the Wilderness Trail into Kentucky, beginning shortly after the American Revolutionary War. Up to 1775 land in Kentucky had been surveyed principally for veterans of the French and Indian War in accordance with Virginia laws. In June, 1776, the Virginia Legislature passed a resolution declaring that all who possessed land in Kentucky prior to June, 1776, should be allowed 400 acres of homestead. ()

Virginia was far away from Kentucky over the mountains and as a result land squabbles arose in Kentucky. There was endless litigation over the land. In 1779 a land law was passed which attempted to smooth out all difficulties. According to this Virginia statute every settler who had occupied a tract and had raised a crop before January 1, 1778, was entitled to 400 acres of land at the price of $3.25 per 100 acres, and was allowed the further right to pre-empt an additional 1,000 acres at $40.00 per hundred acres. This was done to provide for the actual needs of the settler as against the non-resident speculator.

In 1780 a very great number of immigrants seeking not only the elk, the bison and the wild turkey, as well as the actual location of land warrants, began a rush to Kentucky. To assist in solving the difficulties which arose Virginia established a court of four land commissioners to examine claims and award titles of possession. This court sat at Harrodstown, Louisville, Bryant's Station and Boonesborough. It accomplished much good, but the settlement of the State was so rapid that a few years after it had ceased to function the general land condition was as bad as ever. One of the notable results, however, of the land court litigation and dissension was the early granting to Kentucky by Virginia of a liberal county government in 1776, and statehood in 1793. ()

The documentary land records of Kentucky fall into several groups. The earliest of these are known as the Virginia Grants. They were issued by the Commonwealth of Virginia based upon warrants given in some cases as consideration for military service in the French and Indian War (1754-1763) and later in the Revolutionary War. They are dated from 1782 to 1792 and are recorded in 16 books containing 8,909 pages. The Virginia Grants total 9,564 entries. The surveys upon which these grants were issued are recorded in eleven books. Some of these were large land grants given to such persons as Patrick Henry, Daniel Boone, William May, Leo May, Governor Isaac Shelby, and others. With the coming of statehood for Kentucky in 1792

all Virginia Grants relating to lands west of the Big Sandy were transferred to Kentucky and placed in the custody of the Register of the Land Office at Frankfort, Kentucky.

Another group consisted of Old Kentucky Grants. Acting under its own sovereign authority, Kentucky began the allocation of its lands in 1793 under a plan similar to that used by Virginia prior to statehood. The grants given up to 1856 were recorded in one group of records in the Kentucky Land Office, which have come to be known as Old Kentucky Grants. A good many of these grants were given to establish county academies, based on a policy formulated by the Kentucky Legislature in 1798. The law passed at that time provided that each county academy should receive a grant of 6,000 acres of land. There were several other sub-groups of the Old Kentucky Grants, such as Grants South of Green River, and Tellico Grants.

In 1815 the Kentucky State Legislature passed an act relative to land distribution, and the records of the State group these lands under the head of Kentucky Land Warrants, 1816-1873. The act of the General Assembly governing this group of grants opened for sale, at $20.00 per 100 acres, all the vacant lands to anyone in Kentucky, except an alien. The method followed was similar to that originally employed by Virginia, the purchaser securing receipt from the State Treasurer which was in turn covered into a land office warrant, authorizing the owner to locate and survey a certain acreage. When this had been completed and returned to the land office it was registered and a land patent was issued to the owner within about six months. This law did not apply to lands west of the Tennessee River. ()

On February 23, 1835, the General Assembly of Kentucky passed an act under which each county in Kentucky was given all the vacant and unappropriated land within its boundary lying east and north of the Tennessee River. This is the most recent group of land grants in Kentucky. Dates for this group are 1836 to 1940.

The Patricks of Kentucky figured in these early land grants and from time to time persons of this name have received grants, all of which are of record in the Land Office of the State. A record of these grants to persons of this name will enable the student of the family to get some information regarding the location of the land of the various members of the family. In the following pages, I have taken from Jillson's index to these grants the names of the Patricks who from time to time have been the recipients of land. ()
